

Dear Lt. Jones,

I just knew that you will replace me in my assignment in Kampala.

I am writing to give you some advice and describe your work here.

These months were very fast in Kampala. It is very hot and the humidity is very high. Be prepared to sweat. At the moment we are sleeping in tents, but we hope that the new barracks are ready for October. The instruction is easy because the Somalis are very disciplined but we still have a problem with the language. Their English is very limited.

The tents are not very comfortable. The bed is an inflatable mattress, and when you move at night, you feel dizzy.

Be careful with the mosquitoes. They can transmit a lot of diseases. Use all possible protection, such as a mosquito net and lotion.

There is a building where offices are located where you will find telephone and internet access. I go there very often because it is the only place in the camp with air conditioning.

There is a small bar serving local beer, coffee, sandwiches and snacks, but they are not very good. Ugandans abuse of spices.

Don't hesitate to write me asking whatever you think.

I hope to see you soon.

Lt. Martinez
