

During the last decade the educational level in the schools has fallen in exponential way, you would notice a cultural decrease reading the national newspapers or watching TV programs. In this essay I am going to explain you not only my point of view about educational level of the Schools in Spain but also the steps that could have been taken in order to prevent the current panorama.

Comentario [s1]: Of our/of Spanish

Comentario [s2]: Simply by

Comentario [s3]: To you

Comentario [s4]: Not necessary

Nowadays the children who study in Schools of Spain are less prepared than their precesors and from my point of view the main reason for that was the change in the way to teach. Let me explain you, about ten years ago when the professor explained a lesson to his students all of them paid attention to him, because of they knew that they had to work hard at home to pass the exam. On the other hand nowadays students don't need to work as hard as their precesors because teachers not only explain in a deep way their lessons but also they use new technologies ,like pc programs or the internet, Which entertain the students instead getting their attention. The problem not only involves schools but also high schools and universities and the Spanish families aren't contributing to childhood education, because parents focus in their works instead of their sons.

Comentario [s5]: Spain's schools/Spanish schools

Comentario [s6]: Not as well-qualified as

Comentario [s7]: predecessors

Comentario [s8]: this is

Comentario [s9]: of teaching

Comentario [s10]: not needed here

Comentario [s11]: teacher

Comentario [s12]: not necessary here

Comentario [s13]: see 7

Comentario [s14]: their lessons in depth

Comentario [s15]: instead of attracting

Comentario [s16]: no article needed here

Comentario [s17]: education in childhood

Comentario [s18]: on work

Comentario [s19]: on their children

In my personal opinion If the syllabus and the way to teach hadn't changed the students would have worked their lessons at home and they would have maintained the educational standard in the schools.

Comentario [s20]: teaching methods

Comentario [s21]: been changed

Comentario [s22]: worked on

Comentario [s23]: educational standards would have been maintained

To conclude I would like to recommend that professors re-consider whether the instruments they are using to teach subjects are reaching the students attention or on the contrary they are entertaining them.

Comentario [s24]: teachers

Comentario [s25]: capturing

Comentario [s26]: s'

Comentario [s27]: whether

Comentario [s28]: are merely

Good effort. You do need to pay attention to word-order: many of your sentences are potentially very good but they are let down by syntax/structures which look like direct translations from Spanish. Another look at the rules for the use of the definite article would also be a good idea-the misuse of 'the' doesn't make a text impossible for a native reader to understand, of course, but when it is used correctly the impression that the reader takes away is much more positive, so it is worth revising this area of grammar.SLP2+