

THE NEW NORTH AFRICA

A wave of protests has erupted throughout North Africa. A combination of the global financial crisis, the rising costs of living, high unemployment rates, especially of the educated youth, frustration from decades of living under authoritarian and corrupt regimes, have all combined in different ways in various countries, leading to a wave of rising anger. However, if these protests has a successful end, many things will change in North Africa.

According to economic experts, the South European countries will improve their commercial relations of natural resources, providing enough incomes to improve other economic areas such as industry, agriculture and services to the citizens. However, countries supporting rebels will have the responsibility of rebuilding the infrastructures destroyed during the conflict, so the economy of these countries will be improved too.

The fallen of authoritarian states, not only will allow citizens to gain access to information; besides, they will be able to share their culture with people all around the world and of course get an open mind. On the other hand, young people could see the opportunity to emigrate to Europe, causing a negative effect.

From the military point of view, it is expected that new governments will need new weapons, military equipment, and advisors, so the military relations will be improved and the borders with sub-Saharan countries will be safer.

In spite of the optimistic situation, it is very important don't forget that there are certainly many risks, including, in the short to medium term, the risk that a reactionary, Islamist alternative may prevail. Miguel Rodríguez Sánchez.

Comentario: Cumple las tareas de analizar una situación y especular.

Creo que las imprecisiones de vocabulario son el principal error de esta redacción. Como puede leer en las notas también comete algunos errores en las estructuras completas (not to forget, inversión con not only).

El estilo y el desarrollo de las ideas son buenos, aunque el inglés que escribe no es muy idiomático.

Nota: 2+. Se acerca al nivel 3 pero necesita ser más preciso en las construcciones avanzadas y el vocabulario.

xxx xx 22/10/11 17:38

Comentario [1]: Better: A wave of protests has swept the North of Africa.

xxx xx 22/10/11 17:50

Comentario [2]: Better singular: the rising cost of living,

xxx xx 22/10/11 14:31

Comentario [3]: I would use the plural: if these protests have

xxx xx 22/10/11 17:39

Comentario [4]: More natural: the countries of Southern Europe

xxx xx 22/10/11 14:31

Comentario [5]: Singular: income

xxx xx 22/10/11 17:40

Comentario [6]: Erase.

xxx xx 22/10/11 14:32

Comentario [7]: The noun is the fall.

xxx xx 22/10/11 17:40

Comentario [8]: Inversion: will not only allow citizens

xxx xx 22/10/11 17:41

Comentario [9]: Better: will, of course, open their minds.

xxx xx 22/10/11 17:41

Comentario [10]: Continue using the future: young people will see

xxx xx 22/10/11 17:42

Comentario [11]: Suggestion. I would erase these words to be more straightforward.

xxx xx 22/10/11 14:33

Comentario [12]: Construction: not to forget that...