

RIOTS SPREAD ACROSS ARAB WORLD

A new revolution is emerging from the oppressed people of Tunisia. One day they wanted to weak up and get the perception of freedom.

It just seemed an attempt at freedom what would be reduced soon. No one thought they were successful, but this was the beginning of Arab Spring.

The real revolution is created through the Social nets of Internet where they claimed a democrat government, human rights, etc..., ultimately to pull down the former regimes. Tens of thousands of anti-government dissidents flooded the street of several Meddle Eastern countries like a domino effect.

Western countries are in alarm, due to, firstly, the poverty what are immersing most of these countries. If poverty had been eradicated, the fundamentalist would have enough power to risk the constitutional government. Secondly, Armies control the situation at the moment; it means the citizens must remain under their decisions, until a new stable government is created in each country where the Revolution is done.

Much has been said in recent Conference in Madrid about the potential of applying the "Turkish model" to the Arab world. A model where the government is based in a secular democracy, separation between Church-State, and the three branches of State must be independent.

What will Western countries affect the new situation for their geopolitical strategies? Some countries like Egypt made, in concordance with Western countries, as a barrel from fundamentalism. Alliances and interests shift over time. The Arab spring is a good opportunity for western countries to rethink their interests in the Middle East.

In any case, the West will not be able to dictate the future political landscape of the region.

Good. But you need to pay more attention to word order-this is very important in making your work 'read' naturally, and is something that the native reader will always notice ,since word order is not as flexible in English as it is in Spanish.SLP2
